Jim Shaw, Macy Conference (2019)

Jim Shaw presents five new politically tinged, surrealist new paintings, all touching on themes of the family, which he calls "the beloved core of the American dream." The artist draws the inspiration for his imagery from vintage advertisements, and takes the show title from a Freudian psychological complex in which children believe that they've been taken from their real parents, who are richer and more important than those by whom they are being raised.
